DISCUSS JEWISH VALUES WITH YOUR CHILD

Tzelem Elokim (celebrating diversity / created in God's image) is a recognition that while everyone is different, we have a lot in common. Many communities are comprised of individuals with diverse backgrounds, abilities and beliefs, and everyone deserves to be treated with the kindness and respect.

What are some of the things that make you interesting and unique?

What can you learn from people with a different background or culture than yours?

How can you respond when someone has a very different opinion or belief than yours? What responses usually yield the best results?

DO FUN STUFF AT HOME

When a new family moves into your neighborhood, joins your synagogue, or comes to your school, make a "welcome wagon" kit to celebrate their joining your community. What would you need to provide to make this family feel welcome in your community?
